

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

An attachment for a plow may be attached to the cutting edge of a plow. The attachment includes a member having a surface with forward region that transitions into a lower contacting region, to thereby allow the plow to ride over protruding obstacles without hanging up on the obstacles. The attachment may be retained to the plow by removable pins extending between the attachment and the plow, allowing convenient assembly and disassembly of the attachment to the plow.